Ethical Committee

The ethical committee reviews ethical aspects of research proposals/clinical trials and approves the projects.

The research ethics committee (REC) evaluates the ethical acceptability of research before participants can be enrolled in a study. In addition the REC will examine certain related financial and scientific aspects.

REC's helps to ensure the wellbeing safety and protection of persons who participate in research.

To achieve this an ethics review and favorable opinion must be sought before the research can begin and ongoing research will be continually monitored.
